38th Professorial Lecture:

Prof. Oyerinde Suggests Teaching Health Education Across all Varsity Faculties

By Bala G. Abdullahi

Prof. Oyesegun Olufemi Oyerinde presenting his Inaugural Lecture titled: Man does not die but kills himself: The dilemma of the Health Educator and the Moderating Influence of Health Education, on Thursday, 4th April, 2019 at Musa Abdullahi Auditorium, New Campus, the erudite scholar also quoted copiously from some Holy Scriptures, to buttress his argument and stated that in the beginning, God planted a garden for man where lions ate grass and snakes were friends to man while man thrived only on fruits, grains, nuts and vegetables and he was meant to live forever and not taste death.

Professor Oyerinde, however, said soon 'by man's action of commission or omission, through inhumanity to himself, such privileges were lost and God pronounced that man would not live forever anymore.'

To further substantiate his claims, the scholar listed infectious diseases, accidents, environmental disasters, security problems, lifestyle, eating anomalies e.t.c. as man's creation which today have become some of the critical factors that shorten his existence on earth.

Going to specifics, the erudite scholar mentioned environmental pollution, lack of exercise, rest and sleep, effect of drug abuse, cigarette smoking and alcohol consumption, nutrition anomalies and poor

A Professor of Health Education in the Department of Physical and Health Education, Bayero University, Kano, Professor Oyesegun Olufemi Oyerinde, has identified man's inhumanity to himself anchored by faulty nutrition and diet, drug abuse and misuse, unhealthy life style as among the many factors that contribute to shorten his lifespan on earth. This realization, he argued, made him to conclude that Man does not die, but kills himself instead.

Presenting the 38th Professorial Inaugural Lecture lifestyle including air, road and sea accidents as some of the major causative factors that man encourages and which contribute substantially to hasten his death.

He said the dilemma of the health educator was expressed in the fact that health education is constantly provided in schools while health information is also provided at every opportunity by stakeholders, yet man's adherence to prescriptions, health counselling, health education and motivation has been very poor, adding that the effect of these low responses to a holistic approach to health needs affects his individual mental, family and social health and safety as well as community environmental health.

Professor Oyerinde, however, stated that hope was not lost, saying that a lot of efforts had been made on how man can live well and how best he can manage his health. He said adequate diet and nutrition, selective and informed use of drugs, fitness, exercise, rest, sleep, relaxation, recreation and personal healthcare and screening could help.

He also suggested the adaptation of the natural gifts of nature; ill health would not be able to take the better of him. These natural gifts have been transformed into therapies that are efficacious in dispelling stress, morbidity and other forms of untoward health conditions.

French Government to Sign MoU with BUK on Agriculture, Climate Change, Health

By Nura Garba

The French government and Bayero University, Kano are to sign a memorandum of understanding (MoU) on climate change, health and security challenges. The government said it was willing to explore more collaborative opportunities with the University.

The French Ambassador to Nigeria, Mr. Jerome Pasquier, who visited many facilities in the University, including its Solar Power Project, Centre for Dryland Agriculture (CDA) and Dangote Business School, assured the Vice Chancellor that he was highly impressed by the level of development and huge investment made on these centres, assuring that his government would collaborate with the University on climate change, dryland agriculture, health and security.

The French Ambassador said he was instructed by the President of France when the latter visited Nigeria last year to develop collaborations with key partners, including Universities and research centres. He said that Bayero University was one of those Universities the French government saw as an opportunity to make a long-term investment.

The scholar said that based on his many years as a teacher of health education and based on the outcomes of his researches and writings, as a solution to the causes of death and dying into which man has plunged himself, he recommended that health education should be intensified. He said utilizing health education would lead to a total reduction in the number of avoidable deaths and ill health.

He also recommended that individuals at home, schools and communities should be motivated to take control of their health through the adoption of health promotion approaches exemplified in drug cessation, exercise, rest and sleep, adoption of wholesome nutrition intake and personal health practices and behaviours including vegetarian, adoption of water therapy as examples.

Professor Oyerinde also suggested to Bayero University and indeed to all other universities in the country to include first aid, safety and health education as a GDS course across Faculties. This, he reasoned, would equip students with skills that have carry over values into old age and would prepare them to overcome future health challenges. He said it would also provide a solid foundation for healthy people, knowing fully that a nation comprising healthy citizens is a wealthy nation.

Mr. Pasquier said he would go back to Abuja with many ambitious projects in mind with a view to making them functional.

In his response, the Vice Chancellor, Professor Muhammad Yahuza Bello, said the University had a long-term relationship with France. He said that B.A French was one of the oldest programmes studied in the University, adding that BUK had a number of activities with the French Embassy in Abuja. He added that the University had many students from French speaking countries.

“We are also aware that French Embassy is working particularly on addressing the security challenges in Nigeria and other parts of West Africa. I want to inform his Excellency that, in Bayero University, we are playing our part in trying to address those societal challenges.”

The Director, Centre for Dryland Agriculture (CDA) and that of Academic Centre of Excellence in Population Health and Policy (ACEPHAP) made brief presentations on the programmes, objectives and activities of their centres.

The Director, CDA, Professor Jibrin M. Jibrin, said the focus of his centre was to specialize as a regional centre of excellence in dryland agriculture, delivering quality training and applied research in response to the needs of the West and Central Africa. He said the CDA engaged French High Council for Education of Research and Higher Education (HCRERES) to evaluate and accredit its programme, noting that it would be glad to collaborate French Universities and research centres.

The Director, ACEPHAP, Professor Hadiza Galadanci, who was represented by the Deputy Director, Training, Dr. Ibrahim Nashabaru, said being a new centre, it had planned to address health concerns of Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs 3): maternal health, child health and infectious diseases with particular emphasis on increasing human resources for health and turning research into practice for evidence-proven interventions.

VC Launches Additional Student Buses

By Rabi'u M. Sagir

The Vice Chancellor, Professor Muhammad Yahuza Bello, has promised to ensure positive gestures in any matters concerning welfare of students in order to provide an atmosphere conducive for learning. He was speaking on Wednesday, 27th March, 2019, at the Student Bus Stop, while launching two buses, a Marcopolo and one other bus.

The Vice Chancellor said welfare of students was always in the heart of the management of the University. That was why “we try to provide these two additional buses so that they will add value to the ones that are operating now. The Vice Chancellor called on the students to make good use of the buses. He also directed the drivers to take the students free of charge during the first trip as well as urged them to create a good and matured relationship between them and the students while ensuring good maintenance of the buses.

Professor Bello said the University Management was committed to providing conveniences to male students

The VC, Prof. M. Y. Bello and other management staff boarded on one of the buses during the commissioning ceremony

Communiqué from the 3rd National Engineering Conference on Bridging the Gap between Academia and Industry (ACICon2018)

The ACICon2018 Conference was successfully held at the Faculty of Engineering, Bayero University, Kano. At the end of the Conference, the following resolutions were reached:

1. The Conference recognized that the world economy has moved from resource-based to knowledge-based, and hence the need for synergy between Academia and Industry for sustainable development;
2. The Conference acknowledges the role being played by the National Office of Technology Acquisition and Promotion (NOTAP) in anchoring the linkage between the Manufacturers Association of Nigeria (MAN) and the Faculties of Engineering in Nigerian Universities;
3. The Conference emphasizes the need to focus the Engineering training towards developing critical thinking and relevant practical skills to solve existing industrial challenges;
4. The Conference advocates for the active participation of industrial partners in the ongoing review of the Engineering curriculum in Nigerian Universities;
5. The Conference calls on local industries to identify their challenges and share same with the academia to foster collaborations;
6. The Conference encourages local companies to intervene in the upgrade of University laboratories, partner in research activities and provide fellowship opportunities for researchers to enhance the development of local content;
7. The Conference recommends that Government should strengthen existing policies that promote the acceptance of locally made products for sustainable development;
8. The Conference urged Engineers and Researchers to be proactive and entrepreneurial in identifying and solving socio-economic problems;
9. The Conference applauds the pledge, from the African Centre for Excellence in Dryland Agriculture, BUK, to support academic staff for a one (1) month industrial internship to further bridge the gap between the Academia and Industry.
